EDITOR IN DISTRESS

All of you, be sure to read Richard Hunter's column on the next page. It's a very informative article on this whole health care hysteria going on. Read and listen to someone who is just like you and I and not someone who is being paid to lie by insurance companies. It's not preachy, it's the truth.

If you're weren't lucky enough to have an invite to the 80's Party at The Lodge last Tuesday, then you sadly missed one hell of a shows. Michael Jackson impersonator, Edward Moss, performed numerous times through the night. I was amazed by his dancing skills and his resemblance to Michael Jackson. All the Lodge ladies looked awesome and performed some fun yet sexy skits. We were also spoiled with a surprise visit from award winning entertainer, Schevelle. Wow! Every time I see her, I'm breathless. So was my date which gave me a good excuse to lock lips with her. Like usual the free buffet was delicious and the $2 wells got me quite buzzed.

After The Lodge party my date and I headed over to Bombshell's Cabaret for their customer appreciation party. We were nicely greeted at the door with coupons for free drinks. I could see a bad hangover the next day in my future, but who cares cause I live in the now. We partied there for a few hours with some hot ladies before deciding to call it a day. The next day at work was horrible, but I managed to find lots of time to sleep on the couch before I was mercifully released home.

Those of you into Hip Hop would be wise to head out to Club Onyx to see Trae The Truth perform live this Thursday, August 27. I just barely heard of this last week and didn't have time to set up an interview, but I found a cool biography about him and you can read that on page 6. Club Onyx ad and info on back cover.

One of my favorite bars in Dallas, Reno's Chop Shop, is having their 5 year anniversary party this weekend with kickass shows on Friday (Dying Ground, Holy Hellrod, Burying the Trend, Warkistra) and Saturday (My Son My Executioner, Kaliya, Fighting Chance). Get on your motorcycle or in your hot rod and fuckin' be there. It's located at 210 N Crowds St in Deep Ellum area of Dallas. Also be sure to stop by next door to Reno's Grill for a pre-drinking dinner.

Wrestling fans gotta be excited to hear that Necro Butcher, who starred in The Wrestler with Mickey Rourke, will be wrestling this Saturday, August 29 in Fort Worth with Outcast Xtreme Wrestling. See the OXW interview on page 7 for more information.

Have an exciting weekend! -Gil Tha Thrill

WHAT A FOOL BELIEVES

If only it were merely the words to a Doobie Brothers song. Hopefully you have noticed that there is a big debate over various proposals for health care reform going on in this country. I say hopefully, because I recently witnessed a 35 year old woman from Pennsylvania dressing down Senator Arlen Specter over his intentions to "turn her country into Russia", only to reveal in a subsequent interview that she has never had a prior interest in politics because she had been busy having children. Besides, she had always had a "basic trust in her government". If that sounds like you, quit having unprotected sex immediately and report to your nearest library. Grab something and start reading it. For everyone else, I have come to a sad realization.

I am convinced that 10% of the American population can be convinced of anything...maybe more. If the health insurance lobby didn't know it already, they certainly know it now. With the federal government threatening to regulate their industry, the insurance and pharmaceutical lobbies had to think fast. Pleading their case that the mean old government wanted to curtail their millions in annual profits that they reaped from the sick and afflicted was probably going to have its' public relations challenges. Much easier to propagate myths about what government really had in mind for you, your elderly grandma, and your unwed pregnant daughter. Sarah Palin got a Facebook page, and with that, the misinformation began.

A recent national survey found that 30% of those asked believed that the federal government planned to actually take over the entire U.S. health care system. The fact is that, unlike the health care systems of Canada and Britain, health care reformers plan to introduce a hybrid public/private model, much closer to the systems in France and Austria. 46% believed that health care reform proposals would insure illegal immigrants. None of the versions of health care reform have suggested such a thing. A whopping 60% believe that the reforms being suggested include having taxpayers pay for abortions. Not only is this currently illegal by virtue of the long standing Hyde Amendment, it too is patently false. Not an entirely bad idea in some instances if you ask me, but then the statistical reality of this study probably has me feeling a bit condescending. Perhaps the most ridiculous of all of these myths was the one that you heard the most about. 30% of those surveyed believed that the federal government would use their newly expanded powers to force the elderly to make decisions about how and when they will die. I'm not kidding. I wish I were.

In an earlier time, conservative critics of reform like Sarah Palin and Chuck Grassley supported living wills. The very idea of having end of life counseling covered by insurance was originally introduced by a California Republican. The idea was that in case you go all Terri Schiavo on your family, they would have a document to refer to so as to know what you want for yourself in such a state. The idea was that such arrangements would be covered by insurance in a way that they are not now. Paid for by the government? That sounds like socialism to Joe The Plumber! Let's keep everything funded by individuals and expensive, the way that The Founding Fathers intended it, or something. Cha-ching! The insurance companies are laughing all the way to the bank. Less coverage for their customer base, and to a certain percentage of nitwits, they were more American for it. Now that the insurance lobby has gotten a taste of societal stupidity, they are ready to unveil a real masterpiece. They call it "the compromise".

All you need to do, on behalf of your poor, misunderstood insurance company, is to appeal to your local congressman to oppose the creation of any publicly funded competitor. In exchange, the insurance industry will bow to reforms that will include their subsequent inability to drop the sick from coverage or to deny anyone coverage for preexisting conditions. What a great bunch of guys, right? All that giving without taking, like Barry Manilow's muse Mandy. Except for the fact that once again, big money wins big. The health insurance industry would suddenly find themselves with 46 million new customers, all of who would be mandated by the government to do business with them, without the nuisance of a public competitor to keep their prices under control. After all, just imagine how much money UPS and Fed Ex could make if the post office didn't offer a cheaper option. Man, those mail carriers have it all wrong! The health care lobby is where the big money is at, and they are all too ready for the American voters to throw them in that health care reform briar patch of "compromise".

Naked Girls Reading is a group of beautiful ladies who love to read... naked. That's really it. There's not a whole lot more to it. Should there be? Naked Girls Reading was begun in Chicago in March of 2009 as the idea of international showgirl Michelle L'amour and Franky Vivid. The idea had rolled around in their heads for a few years in different formats, but with the opening of Studio L'amour in 2008 it materialized as the perfect intimate live event.

After the very first event it was obvious to all in attendance that something big had just happened, something spiritual. Immediately, the press took hold and emails started coming in from cities all over the country from ladies interested in starting their own franchise.

By the end of 2009, Naked Girls Reading will be appearing in five major US cities, with more to follow in 2010 including several international chapters. You can catch the Dallas event this Friday, August 28th with Miss L'amour, Courtney Crave and La Divina at The Quixotic Theater, 1116 S. Akard St. and tickets are $15. Get yours by calling 214 821-7469.

Trae Tha Truth Live at Club Onyx Dallas Thursday, August 27

The career of prolific south Houston-based MC Trae began with a guest appearance on Z-Ro's Look What You Did to Me and took root in Guerilla Maab, a group that released several albums during the late '90s and early 2000s. Through a series of solo albums — such as 2003's Losing Composure, 2004's Same Thing Different Day, and 2006's Drama — he further established his status as a lyricist who focuses more on the streets than wealth. In addition to being a member of Screwed Up Click, he has also released a pile of mixtapes that have surfaced outside his region. Restless, another 2006 release, was picked up by J. Prince's Rap-A-Lot label — and therefore the Warner-affiliated Asylum — for nationwide distribution. Andy Kellman, All Music Guide

In hip-hop, every few years a rare voice emerges from a regional scene that carries so much weight that it can't be denied. While the young up and comers flourish on MTV for all the world to see, there's always an underground champion who represents the real pulse of his city, sometimes deeper and more intensely than some want to hear. As artists like Mike Jones, Paul Wall and Slim Thug paint Houston as a city of diamond waterfalls and never ending Bentley dealerships, there's one rapper who is determined to give the world a real picture of his H-Town streets.

Trae grew up in Houston, Texas. Born and raised a product of it's south side streets. Among other notable distinctions, he's a member of the Screwed Up Click and the ABN Gang. Since his first appearance on wax, on his cousin Z-ro's debut CD, Look What You Did To Me, to this moment today, Trae has been one of the most consistently lyrical, street reporters this region has ever known.

His first official release hit the world in 1999, the classic Guerilla Maab album, Rise. Rise helped set the tone for a whole resurgence in Houston. Back then, Trae, Zro and Dougie D were all about 16 or 17 years old, and their youthful fire showed through on every track. Theirs was a new sound for Houston, harder, more aggressive, yet also smarter and more focused than many who came before them. Not since the Geto Boys released their classic Grip It On That Other Level, ten years earlier, had the city heard such genuinely heartfelt angst.

Rise was recorded and released just after Trae returned from a short stint in jail. That experience taught him to focus on his music, but still he remained in the streets. "I caught an aggravated robbery case by being young and crazy," Trae remembers, "I was on the streets. It was a blessing. I didn't do nothing but probably some weeks in jail, but I was on paper for like two years for aggravated robbery. They tried to give me close to 40 years. But it was a blessing man, the DA knew my lawyer and they felt they could give me another chance for me to not mess my life off. Cuz I had been doing music, so I was already known for that. They ended up doing that to where I only got two years deferred, but if I had messed up on that deferred probation then I'd have did the max that I could do on that case."

That forced focus of sorts has paid off for Trae. From his world famous SLAB mixtapes, to his regional solo releases, Trae's name is known in Texas as one of the realest to ever spit. His raw emotion and true tales of the ills of the streets are rare in rap today. On a Trae album you won't find the endless barrage of bling bling. But you will hear some of the most heartfelt tales of woe and fury ever recorded.

"People always wonder why we be so serious," Trae reflects, "and I sit back and let 'em know, we keep a lot of shit we go through inside our chests. We ain't the type to go talk about our problems to nobody so that's what make us good at what we do in this music shit. We go through shit on a day to day basis. That's why we have so much shit to talk about. That's why I'm glad we go through shit. I hate that it be how we go through it but it's good that we do go through it because without that, shit, what would we have? Shit, my brother Dinky doing three life sentences, I can't be there. I don't even want him there. I gotta do this for him and for me and my whole family."

The tales of reality don't come from hearsay or his imagination either. Trae is the rare rapper who really lives the street life every day. Whether he wants it or not, it is a part of him. "Last year I ended up catching a bullshit case being in a shootout that wasn't even our fault," he explains, "it was the fact that motherfuckers up there on drugs trippin' with theyself and can't handle they drugs and wanna get buck. I'm going through so much bullshit, like I was going through a case between our whole ABN family against a whole certain precinct police station. Not no one policeman, I'm talking about literally where it's like warfare. We come out our house they itching to come get us. We ain't in no fairy tale shit. I'm gonna be consistent till they put me in my grave and hopefully when they put me in my grave it's still gonna be consistent."

His solo albums, Losing Composure, Same Thing Different Day, Drama, Return of the Streets, Say Hello to the Asshole and Later Dayz are all regarded as classics. But it's his forthcoming release Restless that has had the streets buzzing for the past year. Restless is a collection of some of Trae's strongest works to date. While there were rumors in the streets of Trae signing a deal with Universal, the real deal is Trae kept things right at home and recently inked a distribution deal with Rap-A-Lot Records.

In the meantime, while going through the process of finally getting a major deal, Trae has stayed busy working with everyone from Paul Wall to Kool G. Rap to The Game. But it's his current single with Screwed Up Click members Hawk and the late Fat Pat, "Swang" that is currently putting him over the top. "Swang" is a heartfelt tribute to everything that made H-Town what it is.

"It's only right for me to bring my culture and my team." Trae will always ride for his people. "Swang," that was a term Screwed Up Click used period. That's just our shit. Pat is a legend man and with me and Hawk around he ain't never gonna fade away. And then Screw, I ain't gonna let that shit fade away. I brought that shit back because I felt my first impact needed to be what I represent and who the fuck they need to be respecting right now because this man paved the way for everybody."

And that's real. The road paved by Screw may be getting trampled by newcomers with pop aspirations, but if you really dig deep into the core of Houston, you'll see that artists like Trae, the Rap-A-Lot Family, Screwed Up Click and the ABN Gang are really what keeps this independent minded city thriving. When everyone else fades away, there will still be the foundation. And Trae is one of the strongest and most unique bricks in that mug.

OUTCAST XTREME WRESTLING

WWW.MYSPACE.COM/OUTCASTXTREMEWRESTLING

Outcast Xtreme Wrestling is new wrestling outfit that has just started doing weekly Saturday shows in Ft. Worth. Tickets are extremely cheap ($10 for Adults, $5 for those under 12 and Seniors and free admission for kids under 5.). The OXW Arena is located at 8149 Camp Bowie West, Fort Worth, TX. Doors at 7pm. Showtime is 8pm. Interview with Stevi Vaughn done by Gil Russell

How long has Outcast Xtreme Wrestling been around?

OXW is a new wrestling federation in the Ft Worth metroplex. We have only been around about a month, but our talent has been within the metroplex for years. Our goal is to bring professional wrestling back to the Ft Worth metroplex like it was done in the days of the Sportatorium.

How many matches do you have a night?

An average show consists of three matches, an intermission, and then it is followed by another three matches. Shows last approximately 2 hours and can run a little over depending on the nightly talent. Fans definitely get their moneys worth!

What kind of matches can the fans be expected to see?

OXW fans never know what to expect. From basic singles competitions to extreme death matches, our fans can always expect the unexpected and to see something different at every show.

Do you have meet and greets before or after the matches?

Fans get the opportunity to meet with some of the wrestlers during the intermission

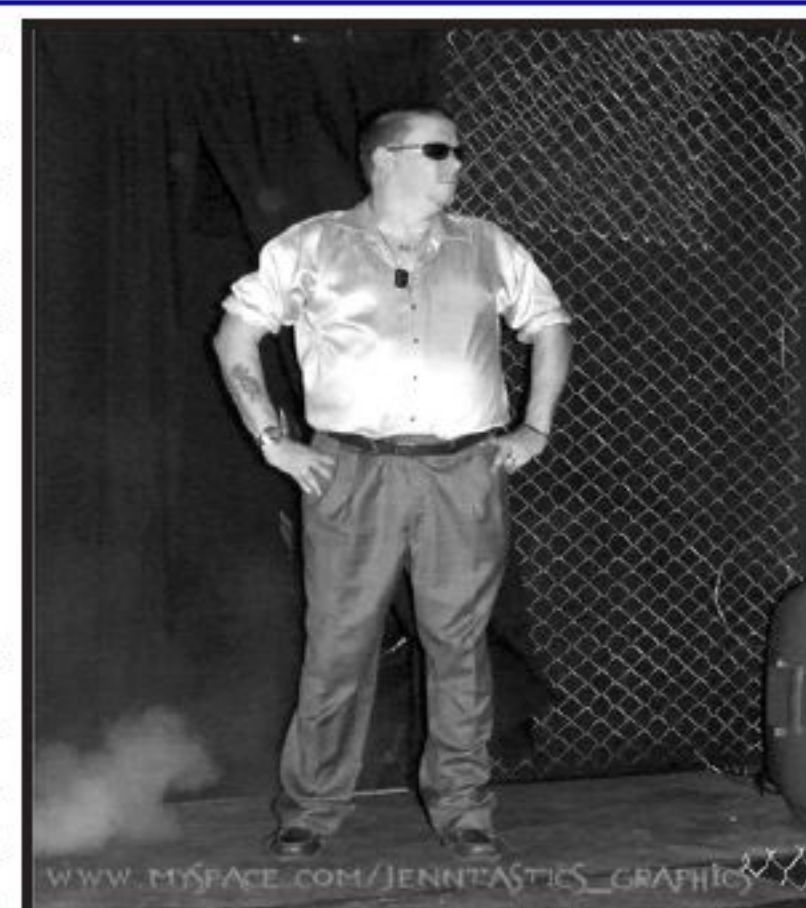

Who are some of the wrestlers?

OXW will have talent coming in from all over. We will have old school Sportatorium talent such as Chris Youngblood and newer talent such as The Necro Butcher from the movie "The Wrestler" starring Mickey Rourke. However, we also have weekly talent with names such as "The Largador" Michael Faith, "The Chicano Assassin" Chuey Martinez, Wally Darkmon, Nobe Bryant, Mace Malone, The Angel of Rath, Cody Knight, Brent Masters, and those are only to name a few.

Will Necro Butcher be one of your main wrestlers or is he a guest wrestlers?

While Necro Butcher is only a guest wrestler, the fans will be seeing him quite a bit. At times he can be expected to be seen on a monthly/bimonthly bases. (He can be seen this Saturday, August 29. -ED)

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

Buddy also did a stint as DC with the Houston Oilers, where on January 2, 1994, Ryan punched out the Oilers offensive coordinator, Kevin Gilbride, on the sidelines during a game on national tv. Why? Ryan didn't think KC was being aggressive enough with his play calling.

Both of Ryan's son's coach in the NFL, Rex is now head coach of the Jets, and Rob is DC of the Raiders. It is Rex who is definitely following in his father's footsteps. When Rex took over as DC of the Baltimore Ravens he called his dad and told him he was implementing the original Ryan 46 "D". I'm not sure, but I think Buddy was doing cartwheels. Buddy was a genius in drawing up defenses and being able to translate that into success with the players. Rex inherited that. He also inherited Buddy's interesting trait of being brash toward other teams, and maybe whatever else.

Since Ryan's now flyin' with supersonic speed with the Jets, Rex is needling Patriots coach Belichick. Publicly. Of course publicly, what good would it do if he used him as a pin cushion privately? He's saying things like he's not intimidated by Belichick, and perhaps suggests the Patriots aren't the baddest apple on the tree, or maybe implies that this season they'll need webbed feet to keep from sinking. He does give him a loose compliment by saying you can't beat no Belichick team by tip-toeing around Foxboro Stadium like you were a kid in a wader.

Rex Ryan created one hell'uva defense with the Ravens, the old 46, as the last few years ought to tell everyone, and now the double R is bringing that to the Jets.

It's gonna be a wild ride, an exciting ride, a "what the hell just happened" kinda ride. But mostly this is gonna be one heck of a fun ride. Get on board.

I gotta talk about this "flap" Jerry Jones has got hisself into. You know, the flap over his big screen monitor hanging low enough in the stadium that it can, and did, interrupt the flow of the game. How? Those pesky punters from the Titans didn't wanna play nice and booted some of the nice off Jones party by hitting the monitor with footballs.

Here's my question: what the heck's a flap?

We got several ways to describe a conflict. Like, a "to do", or "ado", or "set to", or brouhaha, or donnybrook, or upheaval. I got issues with all of 'em.

To me, a "to do" is a list I've been given to get done, an "ado" is some sort of a French goodbye, a "set to" is grabbin' the first available chair at the table, a "brouhaha" is some dumb laugh, a "donnybrook" a twisted creek, and an "upheaval" well, hey, I think we all know what that is. But a flap? C'mon.

I can have a disagreement, an argument, or a slugfest with Jones over his monitor, but I can't have a flap. You wanna flap? Go open an envelope.

Jones can raise the monitor as he chooses, and will for some events, but doesn't believe it has to be raised for his football games. His logic is that the majority of the times the kickers are aiming for the opponent's corners or sidelines. That may be true if it's being kicked from near midfield, but when it's kicked from say the 30 yd line or back from the end zone area, that balls heading high down the center.

And, as a public service reminder, teams DO kick it high every game for hang time to get their coverage guys down to tackle.

Didn't I tell you all's we had to do was survive the summer, get our energy built back up, and get rarin' to go come September? You bet'cha.

This is the first reminder of a couple I'm gonna get ya about the Combative Sports Expo over in Ft. Worth on September 5-6. This is the FIRST consumer show for combative sports held in Texas. This is a very fight fan friendly venue, it's interactive, and covers martial arts, boxing, grappling, and mixed martial arts. There will be an amateur grappling tournament and an amateur mixed martial arts fight. These will be real contests, not staged productions.

The regular NFL season doesn't start until the next weekend so you can enjoy both days. It's at the Amon Carter Exhibit Hall. Start planning.

Well, the NFL starts the weekend of September 13 and we know all about that, but I got even more action to throw at ya. It's time for the Big Nasty. What's that? You don't remember? Man, I'm gonna throw you under the train.

The Big Nasty Hill Climb. It's in Idaho. Yeah, the spud state. Just outside Boise. September 18-20. You can go and just have a hoot watchin' all the riders try to climb The Hill, or you can sign up for the dirty deed.

Come one come all. Bikes of all kinds and riders of all ages. Gender don't make no nevermind here. The Hill takes on all comers.

There's the lower part of the course, and then there's the bad boys. A 250' pro qualifying section, a 260' trophy section, and, of course, the 600' pro course. The angle of attack on these is, well, STEEP. I mean, these things are blown out of the side of a hill by explosive experts. So that means besides steep you got grooves, ruts, cuts, loose dirt, flying boulders, and gravel. Great stuff.

If you ain't camping, and they got spots for tents or whatever type of RV, then you need to call in for room reservations. My suggestion? Camp. Get in with the people and have a ball.

I know all you sports junkies are already hyped for the start of football, but if any of you casuals out there aren't startin' to get juiced, somethin's wrong with your blood supply. And I got an all natural cure for whatever ails ya: the opening bars to Monday Night Football. Dun dun dun dunnnnn. That'll get ya up an dancin'. Woof.

We had an inkling it was gonna be a more exciting year with the NFL but it's gonna be WAAAY more 'n that, it's gonna be HUGE exciting.

Yeah, we'll have the normal excitement, and I'll get to some of that, but do you know where this extra buzz is comin' from? The Ryan's are back. THAT Ryan family, as in "The Sons of Buddy Ryan". Hell, this is better 'n the Sons of Katie Elder!

In case you don't 'member Good Ol' Buddy, here's a refresher: defensive coordinator of that 1985 Super Bowl winning Bears team, and chief architect of the 46 defense. By the way, the "46" didn't have anything to do with the alignment, it came from the jersey number of Doug Plank who was the starting safety.

Buddy went on to become head coach of the Eagles and Cardinals. While head coach of the Eagles in 1989 Ryan hair-balled up the infamous Bounty Bowl, a Thanksgiving Day game against the Dallas Cowboys. There was an alleged bounty of $200 placed on Cowboys kicker Luis Zendejas, who'd been cut by Philly earlier that season. That's also the game where Madden handed out the first Turkey Leg Award, and it was to then Eagle Reggie White.

METRO ANE SPORTS

Maybe you already did the Sturgis run, or maybe you had to miss it, but either way, you need to trek it on up to Idaho and get in on this.

Let's talk some football.

All fans are semi crazed this time of year, comes with the territory. We all know who the top tier teams are, the middles, and, gulp, the cellar dwellers. We start lookin' at schedules to see who we can circle as wins, probable wins, too close to call, and losers. We got hope, which we try to shield our common sense with. We know we're an injury away from being laughingstock. We know we're a few plays away from being high-lights.

But we also know it's gonna be a good year. The way the teams are right now, we got some good games comin' our way. All's we gotta do is enjoy football, not just our favorite team. All's we gotta do is GET READY.

The Cowboys. If ever there was a team that frustrated the shoes off your feet, it's this team. They played real good ball up til the injuries started getting to them, and then a slow spiral down began, ending with their quitting the last two games. That's the carry over this team has, they quit the last two games. That puts a knot in anyone's stomach that's damn sure hard to get rid of.

What do I think of them this year? I think they're a better team. I think they'll be fun to watch. I think they're gonna show up. I don't think they're gonna quit. I also think they have the strongest and deepest running game of both conferences. That running game is truly going to allow Garrett to call an attack that's far more flexible than they had. We got young corners on defense and that's a concern, plus Newman staying healthy, but otherwise I think we got a top 5 defense. The team needs to get tough.

Who do I think is gonna be the exciting teams? For the NFC I like what Singletary's doing with the 49'ers, that might not mean playoffs this year, but they'll be exciting, and they're gonna give the Cards a run for the NFC West. I'm wavering on Arizona, I think the offense is gonna be exciting, how couldn't it be, but I'm not sold on that D.

I think the Bears are gonna dish it out. Hester's still not getting what it means to be a receiver, but Cutlers got more weapons to throw at, and the D is hyped. I don't know what they'll do overall, but the two times the Packers and Vikes meet are heavy metal. I don't know why I like Atlanta, but I think they're comin' out with attitude and that's gonna run them over the NFC South.

Do I like the Eagles? In general, no. For this season, I don't know. If Westbrook stays healthy, and that's gotta be a big IF, then yeah, maybe, but that defense ain't the same. The Giants aren't quite as tall, and regardless of Eli's big contract, that defense will have to be what keeps them up with the big dogs.

The Carolina Panthers gave QB Delhomme a huge contract extension but that don't won't make any difference. As a head coach, Fox's take on the game just isn't what that team needs. They want to pound the ball and won't get receiver Smith help. Too bad.

The AFC is just gonna put on a show this year. I mean, there's gonna be some of the best football games comin' outta here. Top to bottom, the East with Miami, New England, Buffalo, and New York is plain excitement. This is THE BEST division of both conferences.

Pittsburgh, Houston, and the Colts round it out for the AFC's top exciting draw. Do I think it's a walk for the Steelers? Well, on the one hand the NFL saw fit to give probably the easiest schedule to the defending Super Bowl champs, but that North division is harder. I think Cleveland is gonna be fun to watch, yeah, I'm a Browns fan. The Bengals have the potential to be, but they're gonna have to show up, and they've got a problem doing that.

Do I think Denver's gonna bring it? To be kind, I think they're gonna struggle. They got a hell'uva receiver with Royal, but in the regular season he'll get double teamed outta the game. The wild card here is if Brandon Marshall's still with the team and the infighting has eased. If BM's fine, he'll take coverage from Royal, but if not, that offense is in a bad spot, and that's because the defense hasn't been rebuilt.

Readers Response:

Two Dogs:

Is it true fans at Mexico's Azteca stadium were throwing all kinds of debris on US soccer players to jack their game? Was nothing done about it? Is this why we've never won there? Aren't there any game rules governing fan conduct?

Sloan

Dallas

Sloan:

Fans were throwing cups of urine and vomit onto US players. Police did try to shield them but they got doused, too. They could move fans back further away from the field for starters. From what I've been able to find out, no fans were escorted from the area, or arrested, or anything. The international soccer federation apparently will not take steps against Mexico for this conduct. Considering how popular that game is down there, if sanctions came down punishing the team for fan conduct, like loss of a game that sort of thing, then fans would probably start behaving. The smog and high altitude have more to do with why we've never won in Mexico City, but nobody else does either, since Mexico has lost only once there in the last decade or so.

TD

Mr. Two Dogs:

You're always speaking out about having beers around the city, but I don't recall you ever mentioning that you enjoy good mixed drinks or fine wines. Is your palate that unaccustomed to superior beverages or do you merely visit locations that euthanize quality? I'm quite sure you would be embarrassed to dine at an establishment that required a knowledge and proper usage of the table setting.

Seleste

Dallas

Ms. Seleste:

Honey, some of the sports dives I go in, if I ordered one of those drinks that have a parasol in it they'd find my body in an alley beat up and dressed in women's clothes. Nobody's killed my taste buds I simply enjoy a good beer, although there are times I'll wash down some leaves and burnt meat with Mad Dog 20-20 (I try for a batch not over a month or so old as that stuff don't age to good). I use my fingers to eat at crawfish boils, and use bread to sop up the drippin's at good gravy joints. The places I go, nobody'd look down their noses at YOU for usin' a knife and fork, but you sure wouldn't be havin' as much fun, which right now you'd be about as much fun as a room full of dirty diapers. So how's come is it you read my column? I can't imagine any unfortunate you married would be allowed to read it. Are you slumming, dear?

TD

Two Dogs:

How come you never write about women's tennis, or pro tennis at all? You're ignoring a great sport with some great games. It may not be as rough and tumble as football but it really has a lot more action than baseball. Give us some TENNIS, please.

Lucretia

Dallas

Lucretia:

If they had anywhere near the excitement that Danica Patrick offers rolling a throttle I'd be interested, but since I find watching women's pro tennis as exciting as tarring a roof, I don't write about it.

TD

Two Dogs:

Aaron Rogers is a great quarterback and is going to take the Pack to the Super Bowl. He played great last year, it was the defense who lost games and they've fixed that. We host your Cowboys on November 15, and will send them back to Dallas with cheese all over their faces. We're gonna kick Favre's traitor butt, too. Green Bay's the number one team of the NFC and you're about to witness it.

Blake

Port Huron

Blake:

No doubt people aren't giving them credit, but I wouldn't build a skyscraper out of them just quite yet. The Vikings and Bears are gonna have considerable to say about this.

Plane Lands Atop VW Golf On California Highway

A light plane made an emergency landing in the opposite direction to traffic on California's Highway 101 yesterday. Three cars collided with it, but no one was seriously injured.

The pilot apparently ran out of fuel mid-flight and tried to land with the flow of traffic but lost control at the last minute. The highway was only shut for 2 hours as a result.

Homemade Tilting Electric Car Built For $500

The homemade Balanced-Over-Batteries car works like a skateboard tilting its chassis when it steers. The electric car's batteries are slung underneath the cockpit as counterweights and the whole thing leans 45 degrees. Oh, and it was built for only $500.

The B.O.B. is built predominately from found and reused components - the front and rear differentials come from Pintos, the brakes are old Yamaha bike units and the twisting/steering mechanism comes from a helicopter's tail rotor gearbox.

Each differential is connected to two motors, one for each wheel, while the vehicle mimics the action of a two-speed gearbox by switching voltage between 36 and 72 volts.

Retired auto mechanic Robert Lange built all this in his backyard and, once he figures out the time investment, reckons he spent less than $500 on the whole thing.

Motorcycle Stolen Over a Five Year Period

A Chinese man was arrested for stealing a motorcycle - part by part over five years from the factory where he worked.

Zhang, an assembly line worker in a motorcycle factory in Chongqing, had always wanted his own motorbike but could never afford one.

He started stealing parts from the factory warehouse and assembling them at home in 2003, reports the Chongqing Times.

"I don't have that much money, so I came up with the idea of taking the parts home and assembling them on my own," said Zhang.

After five years, he had finally built himself a brand new SUV motorcycle and proudly started driving it on the road. But, almost immediately, he was pulled up by police who discovered that he had no driving licence or paperwork for the bike.

Zhang admitted theft and was fined the equivalent of $725, put on probation for a year, and ordered to return the motorcycle to the factory.

Three-Year-Old Motorcycle Prodigy?

A three-year-old boy has been granted a special licence to ride a motorcycle by judges in India. Azeem Khan had to prove he could control the powerful Royal Enfield Bullet after his dad added special extensions to the controls so he could reach them.

"He is much safer than most adult drivers I know," said proud dad Shantanu, of New Delhi.

"I used to sit him on my bike and he would always grab at the controls. One day he will be a professional racer for sure," he added.

But Azeem, who turns four next month, is not allowed out on the main roads on his own.

"Of course I won't let him drive on the busy roads without me on the bike as well. I trust Azeem but I don't trust other drivers," he said.

And the pint-sized biker already has his sights set on his next set of wheels.

"What he really wants is a Harley Davidson but he'll have to wait a few more years for that," added his father.

Screw Key

The simple concept of a screw driver on your key ring is not new. Nobody has made a high quality key ring screwdriver for the last 10 years, Until Now. They are constructed of heat treated, Blackend steel.

They are so simple, there's not much more to say about them.

Rotgutonix. Digital Rotgut Detector, An Original Gift For Revelers

Rotgutonix detects adulterated alcohol, commonly known as rotgut. Rotgutonix has a built-in chemical sensor that can detect the quality of several alcoholic beverage brands. If the drink in question is rotgut, the gadget will indicate as much on its liquid crystal screen. You can have a look at the use instructions, which explain how Rotgutonix works in full detail.

Rotgutonix is an original gifts that's great for party-animals, and in general for anyone who wants to have a couple of drinks (or more) without running the risk of being poisoned, Rotgutonix is probably one of the best investments you can make to safeguard your health, it'll help you avoid the fearsome side-effects of a rotgut hangover. The nighttime is a little less dangerous with Rotgutonix.

This is a prototype still in the marketing phase. At present, the device is set to analyze the following brands: Johnny Walker, JB, DYC, Pampero, Brugal and Havana club, although in future version we expect that Rotgutonix will be able to analyze the chemical composition of over 20 well-known brands, mainly rum, whisky, gin, and vodka.

The Sync charges USB-based hand-held electronics including GPS, cell phones, DVD players as well as heating and cooling devices and at under a pound is incredibly portable. Simply clip the Sync onto a backpack strap or stow the device into any pack and carry the equivalent of over 5,000 AA batteries with you. Recharge the battery through one of Brunton's solar panels, AC outlet or DC car adapter. Includes rubberized housing for increased durability and auto shut-off for added safety. IPX, CE and RoHS compliant.

Star Wars USB Flash Drives Now Available In Darth Vader, Ewok, And C-3PO Flavors

Look at these big-head Star Wars USB flash drives! They're adorable. Ewoks were always adorable, and C-3PO had a certain lovable charm but now even Darth Vader's getting in on the fun. He'll lull you into a false sense of security and then do that thing where he chokes you from across the room without actually touching you.

Available in 4GB capacities, the MIMO-BOT Designer Star Wars USB Flash Drives go for $40 and include extras like wallpapers, audio clips, icons, screensavers, and more. If these three aren't to your liking, other characters like Luke, Leia, Boba Fett, Han Solo, and others are out there somewhere. Might as well collect them all, eh?

Adam & Eve Releases Sex Survey Results

A recent survey sponsored by Adam & Eve finds that on the average Americans lose their virginity at age 17 or 18. The study, carried out by web survey company Cvent, questioned over 1000 adults about their sexual history.

"Based on everything we read, see and hear these days, we were expecting to find Americans admitting to losing their virginity at an earlier age," said Katy Zvolerin, director of public relations for Adam & Eve.

Of those surveyed, the numbers show that 31 percent of males and 30 percent of females had their first sexual experience at age 17 or 18. The poll also showed that 25 percent of males and 30 percent of females lost their virginity at 15 or 16 years of age, and that 7 percent of males and females waited until they were older than 22.

For more information on Adam & Eve, visit adaman-eve.com.

Sexual Freedom in Afghanistan—HAH!

According to The Guardian (UK) news site, one of the Afghan "governance and development programs" has been a recently-enacted law, apparently only applicable to the 20% of the population which follows the Shia sect of Islam, which allows Shia husbands to "withhold food" from their wives if the wife refuses to have sex with her husband.

While the new law, put into effect by Afghan President Hamid Karzai on July 27, is something of an improvement over an earlier version—that one required Shia women to have sex with their husbands every four days at a minimum and effectively condoned marital rape by removing the need for the wife to consent to sex—its denigration of Afghani women's rights in order to curry favor with fundamentalist Shiite leaders (and, some say, even the Taliban) has engendered disgust from human rights groups around the world.

Man Tells Police Woman Stole His Sex Toy

Police were called to a home on Buddy Phelps Road late on the night of Aug. 11 to take a report on a stolen dildo.

The man who lived there said a woman had lived with him for about a week and when she left, she took his dildo. He added that he had paid about $70 for it. The officer asked him if he'd bought it for the woman. The man said he'd bought it to use with that woman, as well as with other women.

The officer contacted the woman who said she had his dildo, but he had her camera. The man said he would give her back her camera when she returned his sexual device. About 15 minutes later, the woman came back with a male friend and returned the dildo.

She got her camera back, but was concerned the memory card was missing. When the officer told her that was a civil matter, she wanted to know why the dildo hadn't been a civil matter.

The officer told her he had not made her bring the device back, only asked her to so the matter could be settled.

Party Crashers Crash Host's Threesome

Two Flowery Branch brothers are in jail after reportedly interrupting a threesome and beating a man in his own home.

According to Gwinnett County police, the pair showed up to a party at the victim's Duncans Shore Drive home uninvited, but were allowed to stay provided they didn't cause any trouble.

The agreement apparently didn't work out.

The 23-year-old man, a Beef O' Brady's cook, told police he knew the brothers from the restaurant and that they had been barred at one point for "causing problems and fights."

The man said he was in a downstairs bedroom with two women at about 4 a.m. when he noticed Mark Robinson standing in the doorway. He repeatedly told Robinson to leave and not to "disrespect his house," reports said, to which Robinson replied he wanted to watch.

When the man tried to close the door, officers said, Robinson became angry, busted a beer bottle against another door and attacked the man. Soon after, Nicolas Robinson came downstairs shouting, "Don't mess with my brother" and entered the fray, reports said.

The victim said he was held down and beaten, blacking out at one point.

One of the women said she tried to pull the brothers off the victim but was punched in the face and pushed to the ground before other partygoers could break up the melee.

The suspects fled before officers arrived, but were identified using a photo lineup, police said, allowing them to obtain arrest warrants. The brothers voluntarily came in for questioning on Aug. 10, according to police, and admitted their involvement.

Woman Lights Man's Genitals On Fire

A 26-year-old woman is being hailed as a national hero after belying the conventional wisdom that revenge is a dish best served cold.

The unidentified female from the Mediterranean island of Crete set fire to a drunk 23-year-old Briton's genitals after he allegedly tried to sexually assault her in a crowded bar, London's Daily Telegraph reports. She earned further accolades from her countrymen for turning herself over to the police following the incident.

According to a police report, the intoxicated partygoer had taken down his pants and was waving his genitals at women in the bar. He then "forcefully fondled" the 26-year-old woman and asked her to take hold of his genitals.

She responded by soaking his genitals in a liquor. When this failed to cool off his advances, she reportedly grabbed a lighter and set his nether-region on fire.

The alleged sex assailant is hospitalized with what the Telegraph describes as "considerable damage" to his penis and testicles.

Porn Makers Challenged For Not Mandating Condoms

An AIDS advocacy group filed complaints with state officials against 16 production companies that show unprotected sex in porn movies.

The AIDS Healthcare Foundation filed the action with the California Division of Occupational Safety and Health, alleging the practice amounts to unsafe behavior in a California workplace.

"We will not stop until there is a policy of requiring condoms to be used in porn," foundation president Michael Weinstein said.

By law, U.S. adult film actors must prove they have tested negative for HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases within 30 days of going to work on a film.

CalOSHA spokesman Dean Fryer said the regulatory agency requires workers in any industry where there is a "possibility of transmission of fluids," including health care and adult films, to reduce the risk of disease transmission.

"The employers of porn actors are required to provide a safe and healthy work environment," Fryer said.

Nearly 60 adult DVDs accompany the complaints against Hustler Video, Maverick Entertainment, Vivid and other porn production companies in Los Angeles. Many people in the multibillion-dollar industry oppose the use of condoms in the films.

Hustler publisher Larry Flynt told The Associated Press, "people who enjoy viewing adult films do not want to see people using condoms."

"While it might provide some additional protection, the sales are not going to be there to make the effort worthwhile for the actors and actresses," he said.

Flynt praised laws mandating monthly testing for adult film actors as a highly effective way to prevent the spread of AIDS.

Vivid Entertainment head Steven Hirsch agreed.

"If we didn't think the proper testing was in place, we would do something about it," he said.

TopBucksMobile Launches New Sites For Gay, Tranny Niches

Capitalizing on a mobile adult marketplace that finally seems to be moving forward after years of anticipation and frustration, TopBucksMobile has launched two new mobile gateways: MobileMales.com and MobileTGirls.com. The sites join four others in TopBucksMobile's portfolio of sites affiliates can promote.

Both MobileMales and MobileTGirls feature DVD content and mirror the structure of the program's popular iPornoPass.com. Each of the new sites offers access to content from more than 1,000 DVDs, all optimized for viewing on the iPhone and other mobile devices.

"With the success of the iPornoPass 'mobile DVD' site, we wanted to expand the audiences that our webmasters can target," said TopBucksMobile Sales and Marketing Director Lea

FEELING DIRTY

All About Porn: Releases, News and Stars!

Busick. "The gay and tranny categories have always been lucrative to promote, and with the wide sub-niche offerings that our DVD sites present, we now offer something for virtually any taste among mobile surfers.

Both MobileMales and MobileTGirls offer trial memberships starting at $1, with recurring subscriptions priced at $19.95 a month. Both also allow consumer ratings of their content, giving surfers greater confidence about the sites' value when they are browsing through the available titles.

For The Fang-Banger Who Has It All

Talk about knowing how to capitalize on a trend. Tantus Inc. has updated—by popular request, company officials noted—The Vamp dildo. The update coincides with the peak in popularity of all things vampire, including the Twilight books/movies, the Sookie Stackhouse novels/HBO's True Blood and the CW's upcoming show The Vampire Diaries.

The Vamp has been getting a lot of buzz in mainstream press as being modeled after Twilight's leading vampire, Edward Cullen, but there is no official tie-in between the silicone dildo and the movie franchise.

Touting The Vamp as just in time for Halloween, the product description notes it "is a 'realistic form dildo based appropriately on our Sire's design but with a deathly pale flesh tone reminiscent of the new moon's glow."

The Vamp retains temperatures, and Tantus recommends cooling in the fridge for "that authentic experience."

Created from 100 percent ultra-premium silicone and selling for $39.99, The Vamp sparkles in the sunlight (just like a real Twilight vamp, for the uninformed).

Tantus is now taking orders on The Vamp and will begin shipping on a first-come, first-served basis on Sept. 1.

For more information, visit TantusInc.com.

Christians Like Sex Too

While it's true some Christians are a little uptight when it comes to doing the deed, there are a few who like to get their freak on. But if they wanted a toy or game to spice things up when the lights went out, what options did they have?

Enter ChristianLoveToys.com, a new website designed to show that "Christian sex should be spicy and exhilarating for [a] married man and woman as God intended according to His design."

"Traditionally, the shopping experience for sex toy products can be overwhelming, awkward, embarrassing, and is plagued with a plethora of pornographic imagery," the company said in a press release. "Christian Love Toys solves this by not selling any pornography or products with pornographic packaging."

The site does promise to ship all orders discreetly, in nondescript, plain brown packaging. ChristianLoveToys.com.

Swing Time Adam & Eve Pictures

We definitely have a winner with Adam & Eve's newest release Swing Time. Plus you know it going to have some hot action packed sex with Kayden Kross involved.

Kayden plays Suzie who has moved into in new house with husband Bud. What they didn't know before they moved in was that are their neighbors were swingers, which they learn at a party hosted by Kagney Lynn Karter and her husband. At first the new neighbors are not down at all with swinging, but they slowly get drawn into the who open relationship thing and finally switch partners at the end.

Every sex scene here is a winner, with my favorite being the hot tub scene with Angelina Valentine, Sativa Rose and a lucky stud. This release also has one of my favorite girl/girl scene, where Kagney sleeps with shop girl Holly West for a clothing discount while Kayden watches.

Swing Time comes with a bonus disc which includes Kayden's first time squirt, bloopers, tease clips, digital download of movie, interviews and bonus scene from Eden featuring Bree Olson and Ava Rose.

I'm going to give this lustful, steamy affair 5 out 5. -Gil Tha Thrill

Nola's Nuggets

Not Your Ordinary Advice Column

Dear Nola:
My girlfriend's
been hanging out with her girl-

friend a lot lately, the other night, I came home late from drinking with the boys and they were in our bed watching a chic flick... and they were just wearing underwear. Then, I looked in her lingerie drawer the other night and there were girl on girl action mags. What do you make of this?
Worried in Weatherford

the other hand, if she really is interested in women, wouldn't you rather know that now before you both waste too much more time. And if she's bi? What then?....well...maybe there's your fantasy.

Dear Nola:
What exactly is a merkin? and why would my boyfriend ask me for a Pink Mink Merkin for Christmas?
Signed,
Cherry Cola

Dear WWV:
What do I make of this? Sounds like a pretty good male fantasy so far. But assuming, this is really happening under your nose, and you truly are worried, I would ask you about what exactly are you worried? That she will leave you? That she would leave you for a woman? That she is cheating on you with toys you can't compete with? These are important issues to decipher since, if she's just bored or an experiential learner, she may be exploring the options before committing wholeheartedly to a lifetime of sucking your dick. On

My dear Ms. Cola:
A merkin is outerwear for the male apparatus worn for warmth and fashion at wild Hollywood Hills parties. Why he would ask for a Mink one indicates he has expensive taste, and why a pink one?....ah...uh...er.....see above--
Blessings,
Nola

Ranch Humor

A man owned a small Ranch in Texas. The Texas Work Force Department claimed he was not paying proper wages to his help and sent an agent out to interview him.

"I need a list of your employees and how much you pay them," demanded the agent.

"Well," replied the farmer, "there's my farm hand who's been with me for 3 years.

I pay him $200 a week plus free room and board. The cook has been here for 18 months, and I pay her $150 per week plus free room and board.

Then there's the half-wit. He works about 18 hours every day and does about 90% of all the work around here. He makes about $10 per week, pays his own room and board, and I buy him a bottle of bourbon every Saturday night. He also sleeps with my wife occasionally."

"That's the guy I want to talk to ... the half-wit," says the agent.

"That would be me," replied the Rancher.

The New Bra

Dr. Calvin Rickson, a scientist from Texas A&M University has invented a bra that keeps women's breasts from jiggling, bouncing up and down, and prevents the nipples from pushing through the fabric when cold weather sets in.

At a news conference, after announcing the invention, a large group of men took Dr. Rickson outside and kicked the shit out of him.

Barber Tries To Rob Store Over Bad Beef Jerky

Police said a Cleveland barber became so upset by what he considered bad beef jerky that he returned to the store where he bought it and tried to rob the owner. Police said the 28-year-old barber walked into the store where he bought the snack, just two doors down from his barbershop, and tried to rob the owner Thursday night.

The owner told the man he recognized him and chased him outside with a baseball bat.

The first police officer who arrived on the scene was also familiar with the barber because he cuts the officer's hair.

Police arrested the man at his girlfriend's house a few miles away.

The barber told police the stick of beef jerky he bought sickened him and his dog.

Suspicious FedEx Package Contains Live Snakes

Police said a suspicious package at a shipping store turned out to be a box of live boa constrictors. Fairfield Township police said they were called Tuesday after FedEx Office employees saw two pillowcases moving when they got curious and opened the parcel at a store about 20 miles north of Cincinnati.

Officer Justen McDade said he looked in one pillowcase, saw a snake and quickly tied the pillowcase closed. A reptile rescue group was contacted and took custody of the snakes.

A local man was listed on the shipping label, and the package was addressed to a man in Phoenix, Ariz. He's been told he may not get the snakes.

McDade said authorities are trying to verify if the sender had a license for shipping snakes. No charges have been filed.

Police: Man Wearing Speedo Tried To Steal Vehicles

A burglary suspect wearing only a Speedo-style swimsuit has been arrested in Connecticut after a police dog tracked him down and bit him on the leg. Police say they spotted the suspect in East Hartford on Thursday wearing the bathing suit and holding a toolbox that had been stolen from a truck. They say he tried to steal several vehicles and also took items from them.

Police say he tried to run from them, but a police dog found him hiding behind a car.

The Journal Inquirer of Manchester reported that he was being held after his arrest on $50,000 bail. He was scheduled for arraignment Friday, but the result of that hearing was not immediately available.

Man With Spears Tattoo Steals Earring-Wearing Dog

A man with a tattoo of Britney Spears' name on his arm or neck allegedly stole a Chihuahua with pink earrings from a South Florida gay bar. Brian Dortort, 48, said Thursday he has spent weeks searching for his 4-month-old pooch, named Hudson Hayward Hemingway. The dog, about the size of a softball, was in a specialty pet bag.

Dortort said he let a man hold the Chihuahua for a moment during a friend's birthday party, then both of them disappeared.

Police said a suspect has been identified, but it's up to the Broward State Attorney's Office to decide whether to issue an arrest warrant.

Woman Sues Zoo Over Splashing Dolphins

A woman is suing a Chicago-area zoo for a 2008 fall near a dolphin exhibit, accusing zookeepers of encouraging the mammals to splash water and then failing to protect spectators from wet surfaces, local media reported on Thursday.

In her suit filed earlier this week, Allecy Edwards said she was injured while walking near an exhibit at Brookfield Zoo, where a group of Atlantic bottlenose dolphins were performing, media said.

Officials "recklessly and willfully trained and encouraged the dolphins to throw water at the spectators in the stands, making the floor wet and slippery," but failed to post warning signs or lay down protective mats or strips, the suit said, according to the reports.

Edwards is demanding more than $50,000 for lost wages, medical expenses and emotional trauma from the Chicago Zoological Society and the Forest Preserve District of Cook County, which operate the zoo in Chicago's southwest suburbs.

Woman Awarded $2M After Dentist Pulls 16 Teeth

A South Carolina woman has won a $2 million jury verdict against a dental clinic that mistakenly pulled 13 teeth. The State reported that 28-year-old Elizabeth Smith wanted three teeth pulled when she went to the Sexton Dental Clinic in Florence in 2006. Her lawsuit said a dentist at the clinic pulled all 16 of her upper teeth.

State court records in Florence indicate the jury returned the award late last week.

One of Smith's lawyers, Robert Ransom, said the woman plans to have restorative surgery as soon as possible. That's estimated to cost about $80,000.

DIY Cigarettes? Some Smokers Start Growing Tobacco

Something unusual is cropping up alongside the tomatoes, eggplant and okra in Scott Byars' vegetable garden — the elephantine leaves of 30 tobacco plants.

Driven largely by ever-rising tobacco prices, he's among a growing number of smokers who have turned to their green thumbs to cultivate tobacco plants to blend their own cigarettes, cigars and chew. Byars normally pays $5 for a five-pack of cigars and $3 for a tin of snuff, the seed cost him $9.

In urban lots and on rural acres, smokers and smokeless tobacco users are planting Virginia Gold, Goose Creek Red, Yellow Twist Bud and dozens of other tobacco varieties.

Although most people still buy from big tobacco, the movement took off in April when the tax on cigarettes went up 62 cents to $1.01 a pack. Large tax increases were also imposed on other tobacco products, and tobacco companies upped prices even more to compensate for lost sales.

Some seed suppliers have reported a tenfold increase in sales as some of the country's 43.3 million smokers look for a cheaper way to get their nicotine fix in a down economy. Cigarettes cost an average of $4.35 a pack, home growers can make that amount for about 30 cents.

It's the latest do-it-yourself movement as others repair their own cars, swap used clothes and cancel yard work services to save money.

Provided the tobacco isn't sold or traded, the Food and Drug Administration doesn't regulate home-grown tobacco. Most people grow for cigarettes, but some blend their own cigars and chew.

The FDA and U.S. Department of Agriculture don't keep statistics on home growers, though seed suppliers and Internet buzz suggest strong interest.

Seedman.com has sold more than 100,000 packets of tobacco seeds this year, compared with 22,000 in all of 2008, president Jim Johnson said. The Gautier, Miss.-based company offers 40 varieties of tobacco from around the globe and packages various flavor blends for first-time growers.

A grower who purchased one of Johnson's Oriental and Turkish blends for $24.50 could satisfy a pack-a-day habit for more than three years, according to Johnson's calculations.

However, growing and processing tobacco can challenge even the best gardeners. The nearly microscopic seeds must initially be grown inside and transplanted after the threat of frost has passed.

The plants are susceptible to an army of pests; must be topped, or pruned, to encourage leaf growth; require rotating every few years; and require the proper chemical soil balance. The leaves must be cut and hung to dry.

A seed started in March can be ready to smoke as soon as October. Some anxious growers have been known to microwave leaves to hasten the drying. For purists, the leaves can be cured, or aged, like a fine wine for up to three years.

Partnered Gay Clergy Welcome, Lutheran Church Says

The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) has voted in favor of eliminating its 20-year-old ban against ministers in gay relationships on Friday.

The vote by 1,045 ELCA representatives meeting this week in Minneapolis came late in the day and wasn't as close as expected. With a 559 to 451 vote church liberals did away with asking gay and lesbian pastors to remain celibate.

"Today I am proud to be a Lutheran," Emily Eastwood, executive director of Lutherans Concerned/North America, said in a statement released by Goodsoil, a coalition of gay-inclusive Lutheran groups.

ELCA is the largest Lutheran denomination in America with nearly 5 million members.

The single-sentence resolution says the church is committed to finding ways to allow people in "accountable, lifelong, monogamous, same-gender relationships to serve as rostered leaders."

Previously the church officially removed gay and lesbian pastors from the ELCA clergy roster if they entered a relationship. But often pastors remained in their positions. Placing them, technically, outside the church's hierarchy.

In 2008, Simmons made history when she became the nation's first openly lesbian African-American mayor. She replaced Kenneth Reeves, America's first openly gay African-American mayor.

Salt Lake City To Consider Gay Protections Bill

Salt Lake City Mayor Ralph Becker has proposed a nondiscrimination bill that includes gay protections.

Becker, a Democrat, began circulating a public discussion draft of the proposal on July 21. The mayor is expected to introduce a final bill to the City Council in mid-September.

The current language of the bill would ban discrimination based on race, sex, age, disability, sexual orientation and gender identity (transgender protections) in the areas of employment, public accommodations and housing. Religious organizations and state agencies would be exempt from the law.

Becker, 57, has asked for public comments on the draft bill, which he says will be taken into consideration before drafting the final ordinance.

A July discrimination report by the 8-member Salt Lake City Human Rights Commission is being given credit as the catalyst for the proposed measure. The commission found that discrimination remains a problem in the city.

Lesbian Mayor To Marry In African-American Church

Openly lesbian Cambridge, Massachusetts Mayor E. Denise Simmons will marry her longtime partner Mattie B. Hayes Sunday, August 30. The couple will exchange vows in a predominantly African-American church, a possible historic first.

"I believe this may be the very first African-American church to hold a same gender wedding, and that's something that just wouldn't have happened years ago," Simmons said in a press release.

"But times are changing, people are becoming more accepting of their fellow citizens, and we are slowly arriving at more of a 'live-and-let-live' kind of world," she added.

The ceremony will take place at the historic St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church near Harvard Square and will be conducted by Rev. Leslie K. Sterling.

The announcement of an Episcopal Church blessing a lesbian marriage comes quick on the heels of a historic church vote that gives bishops the discretion to bless gay unions, especially in states where gay marriage or civil unions are legal.

The state of Massachusetts was the first to legalize gay marriage five years ago. Since then over 16,000 gay and lesbian couples have exchanged vows in the state.

Brad Pitt To Bill Maher: Pot, Gay Marriage Are Good. Religion Is Bad!

Brad Pitt chatted with Bill Maher on Friday night about his pro-gay marriage, anti-religion, and pro-marijuana agenda.

"What is it about religion you don't like?" Maher inquired

"You know, I grew up in a religious family, in a religious community and it just doesn't make sense to me. It just doesn't work for me in the long run," Pitt said. "I never wanted to step on anyone else's religion and their beliefs -- that's what's great about our country -- until I started seeing it defining policy. ... Like gay marriage, you have a group of people telling other people how to live their lives, and you can't do that."

Pitt went on to say, "I just say you have to, you really have to check what country you're living in because the freedom that allows you to practice religion is the same freedom you're stepping on. That's not right. And I want to add that if there was a nation of gay married couples who were telling you you couldn't practice your religion, I'd be speaking up for you too. So, let's stop the nonsense."

He also discussed his pothead past with Maher, who recalled being at a party with Pitt when he rolled joint after perfect joint -- all night long.

"I'm an artist," he said, of his joint rolling. But he's quit smoking, explaining that it turns him "into a doughnut."

"I'm a dad now. You want to be alert," Pitt said.
